

Dehner Guide to Leather

Know your options...Ride in style!

Although there is no substitution for actually feeling the leather between your fingers, we have done our best to describe our leather selections in detail to help you make the most informed choice possible.

European Imported Calfskin

Imported from the finest tanneries Europe, our imported calfskin has a soft velvety feel. A beautiful hand-rubbed finish makes the calfskin leather the top choice for dress boots, but can be worn for most any occasion. Proper care must be taken however as this leather is a bit more delicate.

All non-black European calfskin leathers such as cordovan, brown or tan will be a bit higher in price. This is because making a hide free of imperfections is much more difficult in lighter colors.

Dragoon

More sturdy than the calfskin, our dragoon leather is heavily oiled which helps resist water and makes for easy care. A more "coarse-grained" leather, the dragoon has a flat, dull sheen (due to the oil) and cannot be shined. A perfect choice for boots that will see a lot of work in the field or heavy riding. A real "rough and tough" leather, yet incredibly comfortable with a soft feel.

Voyager

Very similar to the Dragoon leather but not oiled. Tough and durable, Voyager leather has a silky finish which shines up beautifully. An ideal leather for those wishing to maintain a dressy appearance while still able to put the boots through heavy use. More durable than calfskin, and at a lower cost. A very popular leather for both military and police boots.

Dehcord

A synthetic leather made by Majilite®. Used mainly on the exterior of stock patrol boots. Very low maintenance and able to resist many of the scratches and dings you might experience with a calfskin type leather. Dehcord is only used in the uppers of the boot, while the foot is still constructed in Voyager.

ME Leather

The suede used in our ME boots is a rough-out cowhide leather. Produced and tanned in the U.S., it is what you would expect from America's Premier Bootmakers. Heavy weight for durability, but soft for easy break in and long lasting comfort.
